Dear Dallas:

Enclosed is a list of our participants for the April 5-6 conference at State. Each has accepted. The agenda indicates whether they will be speaker or discussant. We will ask for a 2-3 page outline of remarks for each speaker, provided at least one week before the conference, so we can distribute to discussants. That should go into the contract letter. Also, we have a considerable number of people, so we think that the honorarium should be limited to one fee per person; [] for the speaker and [] for discussants would seem proper. If a panelist was staying for both days, we would agree to cover per diem for the second day, but no additional honorarium. That should keep it within the budget.

The list is for all practical purposes complete; of course, one or two might change. I will send each of the addressees an up-to-day copy of the agenda, but they expect to hear from you about how to get into the building, reimbursement, etc. We are also planning a lunch, which will be paid for; you need not worry about this detail, as Alan Lukens has reserved the Foreign Service Club. Also, we will get money for coffee and donuts on both days. Is [] still the correct amount?
